Jewelry was essential for Crazy Rich Asians. “Asian women like ornamentation in a way that I think a lot of Western women shy away from,” said Kwan. “They aren’t afraid to wear jewelry. Big, bold, beautiful jewelry.” Some of the film’s most notable pieces of jewelry, worn by the Young family matriarch and her ever-regal daughter-in-law Eleanor Young (Michelle Yeoh), were designed by Michelle Ong of luxuriously authentic jewelry label Carnet. Kwan describes Ong’s work as “museum-piece artwork.” These delicate and incredibly ornate pieces make use of real stones. Vogt said that Yeoh winds up wearing one of the gigantic diamond brooches as part of the belt that holds Eleanor’s wedding outfit together.
